

Summary of Major Improvements

For this task, I focused on upgrading the website from the initial draft by improving the code structure, adding key JavaScript functionality, and refining the user interface to be more professional and user-friendly.

Code Structure and Organisation

The most significant structural change I made was to refactor the CSS. Instead of keeping the CSS code inside a `<style>` block in each HTML file, I moved all of it into a single, external `style.css` file. This cleans up the HTML and makes the site's styling much easier to manage from one central location.

New Features and Functionality

I added JavaScript to make the site more dynamic and robust.

- Form Validation: The contact form now has a comprehensive validation script (`validation.js`). This script checks the user's input before the form is submitted to make sure all required fields are filled out, the email address looks valid, and the new phone number field only contains numbers.
- Dynamic Footer Content: I created a small script (`last-updated.js`) that automatically adds the current date to the footer. This ensures the "Last Updated" information is always current without me having to change it manually.
- Interactive UI: I added a simple hover effect to the pricing cards on the packages page. This small animation adds a bit of interactivity and makes the page feel more responsive to the user.

Design and User Experience

Finally, I made some changes to improve the overall design and user experience.

- Professional Footer: The footer on every page was updated to include necessary information like a contact email and the dynamic "Last Updated" date, making the site look more complete.
- Improved Error Handling: For the contact form, validation errors are now displayed as clear text directly below the field that needs to be corrected. This is a much better experience for the user than the default browser popups.
